Snapshot: The 12-minute short film by Andrew Cividino traces the discovery a radical cure for digestive tract illnesses by transplanting pig organs into the human body. Medical miracle morphs into pop phenomenon as eating garbage explodes in popularity, but society may not be prepared for consequences (social, cultural, moral, political) more chilling and irreversible than a fleeting fad (IMDB). The Screening is being organized under the aegis of Averroes Club for Philosophy and Society (ACPS) of Averroes Centre for Philosophical Studies/Dept. of Philosophy, IUST.
