

Public Relations and Media Centre

December 13, 2023

Documentary on Non-violent Relationship with Environment screened at IUST

Awantipora, December 13 - IUST organized screening of documentary titled "Non-violent Relationship with Environment". The documentary addressed the adverse impact of human activities on the environment highlighting issues of environmental degradation, showcasing the urgency of collective action to counter problems such as deforestation, pollution, and climate change.

The documentary also touched upon international environmental agreements, underlining the significance of global cooperation in tackling environmental issues. Beyond ecological concerns, the film delved into broader societal issues, exploring conflict mitigation and peace-building strategies in environmental context.

The documentary also touched upon international environmental agreements, underlining the significance of global cooperation in tackling environmental issues. By examining the frameworks and collaborations in place, it provided insights into the intricate web of international efforts aimed at preserving our planet.

A central theme was the transformative potential of non-violent relationship with environment and its potential to serve as a catalyst for environmental conservation and broader societal harmony. The participants could identify with the Gandian philosophy extended to our relationship with the environment.

The documentary was followed by a question and answer session. The programme was organized jointly by Department of Journalism and Mass Communication and the Centre for International Relations with the support of Dean of Students IUST.

Issued by PR&MC